

BE SEEN AT THE GRAND THIS WEEK

"WHY GIRLS LEAVE HOME"

"Why Girls Leave Home" is an important question. At the Grand opera house on Thursday, Sept. 21, will be presented a drama in domestic life, dealing with the question and setting forth from one standpoint at least, the answer. The play is a dramatization by Fred Summerfield of a story dealing with the friction of domestic environment, characteristic of so many homes, and the effect upon the sensitive nature of the sister and daughter of the household. The scenes are naturally drawn avoiding melodrama, yet leaving nothing wanting in the pathos incident to all suffering—mental or physical. The presenting company is claimed to be one of the best that is touring the country, and the scenic investiture is said to be very elaborate.

"LITTLE JOHNNY JONES."

At the Park theatre Saturday night, George M. Cohan's famous musical play, "Little Johnny Jones," will be seen in Pittsburgh. "Little Johnny Jones" has been heralded far and wide as one of the greatest hits of the past two or three years, and its long engagement of 16 weeks in New York is certainly proof of its success. "Little Johnny Jones" is chock full of laughable situations and catchy songs, and the same admirable company is still interpreting Mr. Cohan's clever lines and melodies.

The sale of seats in advance for "Little Johnny Jones" has been excellent, and that there will be a bumper house, there is now no doubt.

FOR SECURING SEATS.

The box office is open all day long and up until 9 o'clock p. m. every day—except the noon and supper hours. Seats ordered in advance will be saved until 7:30 for the evening performance and 1:30 for matinee performances.

The talented amateurs of Clarksburg will produce in the near future at the Grand, a new comic opera entitled "The Parvenus." This promises to be one of the smartest events of the year. The proceeds will be used to bring eminent soloists both vocal and instrumental to this city to give concerts for the edification of the musical.

George M. Cohan, the author of "Running for Office," a rural musical comedy to be presented in this city shortly, has given his personal attention to this season's production thoroughly rehearsing the principals and chorists in his own intimate way, which means that the performance is sure to be full of life, action and vigor. "Running for Office," has been one of the leading musical attractions in America for the past two seasons and it is promised will be presented here with the best cast and chorists it has yet had and with an entire new and magnificent production.

Like a Comet

This famous remedy does for the stomach that which it is unable to do for itself, even if but slightly disordered or overburdened.

Kodol supplies the natural juices of digestion and does the work of the stomach, relaxing the nervous tension, while the inflamed muscles and membranes of that organ are allowed to rest and heal. It cures indigestion, flatulence, palpitation of the heart, nervous dyspepsia and all stomach troubles by cleansing, purifying and strengthening the glands, membranes of the stomach and digestive organs.

The Myrtle-Harder Stock Company is one of the attractions booked for the Grand shortly.

Are You Engaged?

Engaged people should remember, that, after marriage, many quarrels can be avoided, by keeping their digestions in good condition with Electric Bitters. S. A. Brown of Bennettville, S. C., says: "For years my wife suffered intensely from dyspepsia, complicated with a torpid liver, until she lost her strength and liver, and became a mere wreck of her former self. Then she tried Electric Bitters, which helped her at once, and finally made her entirely well. She is now strong and healthy." Stone & Mercer and E. G. Bland, druggists, sell and guarantee them at 50c a bottle.

ODDITIES OF ENGLISH.

PUZZLES OF PRONUNCIATION THAT ONE MEETS IN ENGLAND.

Proper Names That in Sound Have Little in Common With the Way They Are Spelled—Welsh Names a Source of Unfailing Confusion.

English as it is spelled and pronounced in the United States is certainly confusing to a degree to any foreigner, but in old England his lot is still harder when it comes to proper names.

"If," said an English writer, "the amiable foreigner is driven to the verge of distraction by our vagaries in pronouncing words ending in 'ough' and cannot for the life of him see why, if 'ough' spells 'koff,' 'though' should not be 'thoff' and 'sough' 'soff,' while 'must' be 'thuff' of our phonetic eccentricities in the pronunciation of place names, which are such a sore puzzle even to ourselves."

"Why, for instance, in the name of all that's reasonable, should we have to say Amesbury when we write and mean Almondsbury, and, when we are in Lancashire, inquire the way to Oost'n when it is Ulverstone we want? These are mysteries which are, until even revealed, one would think, unto babes, and which certainly make the upstart man feel foolish."

"If you happen to be in Suffolk and want to find your way to Waldringfield, near Ipswich, you must avoid at any cost pronouncing the word as it is written. You will be looked at as a freak or a foreigner, but ask for Wunnef! and you will be sent on your way rejoicing. One may be prepared to find that Belfour is pronounced Beaver, but who is to know that as patria, in a Umbrian, is only recognized locally as Spethry? You may ask the native the nearest way to Aspatia till you are black in the face, and he will stare blankly at you for your pains, but breathe the word Spethry and you will get your direction quickly enough."

"Little Urswick is a place unknown to thousands of Lancashire folk who are familiar enough with the village of that name, but call it Lilsick, and their faces will brighten at once with intelligence. Pontefract at once will be called 'Ponthe' by the southerner even as 'Confort' to the Irish, but why should Kelghley be known locally as Keethley and not as Keeley, which is the obvious rendering?"

"But the North county has no monopoly of odd pronunciations. Go to Devonshire and ask for Bithembottom. The odds are you will be told there is no such place. Brimbottom they know right well, and that is the place you really want. Thurescombe, by a similar or worse perversion, becomes Driezzicum, which may or may not be a tribute to the dampness of its climate. There is in Gloucestershire a village called Churchdown, which for some inexplicable reason is always spoken of locally as Chosen. The good people of Churchdown appreciate the joke as much as anybody and tell you how, when the trains were asked to stop there, some one said, 'Make they Chosen people Joyful!'"

"Congresbury, in Somersetshire, is known far and wide as Coombury, and, shades of our Norman ancestors! Hursmonceux, in Sussex, has long degenerated on the lips of many to Hosmonceux. St. Ough is a name that ought not to present any finger, namely, to press up around the iron bars and to gaze through them at the revered rock, on which they see the face in long plain figures, '1623.'"

The rock is surrounded by a high iron railing composed of alternate heart shapes and harpoons and inscribed with the illustrious names of the forty men who drew up the pilgrims' compact on board the Mayflower that November day as they sighted the coast that henceforth was to be their home—Cornelia Hickman in St. Nicholas.

The Judge's Treat.

The Judge's household home was in a small New England village, where he had the reputation of being a very kind hearted and generous man. He was always glad to see his old friends, no matter how rustic they might be.

On one occasion the Judge had some legal business in the capital of his native state, and there met an old farmer from his birthplace who was taking an unwelcome holiday and looked rather bewildered. The Judge invited the old man to dine with him at the hotel.

When the farmer took his seat at the table one of the waiter's laid a bill of fare before him. The old man looked at it, and, then, turning round to look the waiter squarely in the face, he said in a tone that rang through the dining room:

"No need to gimme that, young feller. Judge Brown calls 'ates to settle my bill. He came from our town, and I know his ways."

"Death Rings."

Horrible are the stories of the poisonous rings by means of which so many a murder has been done, so many an undesirable friend or relative got out of the way. The famous ring of Caesar Borgia was massive, but hollow, and in this cavity he carried a deadly poison, which, by means of a cunningly devised slide, was dropped into the wine cup of any guest of whom he might desire to be rid. Other "death rings" communicated poison by means of small, sharp steel claws, eleft in such manner that when the hand of the wearer pressed that of the destined victim a slight wound was inflicted and the poison forced out. Still others concealed in the inside of a polished metal ring, a powerful narcotic, which, when the ring was slipped on, the victim was cold in death within a few hours.

One night is all the time necessary to prove that Pinules is the best remedy in the world for backache and all kidney and bladder troubles. If you have rheumatism or any other blood disease a single dose will give relief. Sold by Stone & Mercer.

PLYMOUTH ROCK'S CRACK.

Its Origin Involves a Unique and Ridiculous Bit of History.

Plymouth has been called the cradle of New England. It is on the coast thirty-eight miles south of Boston and is a thriving and prosperous New England town, with good schools and churches and town hall and shops of all kinds and comfortable homes.

On the flat strip of land that runs for miles up and down the shore of the bay the diminutive white houses of the fishermen are crowded close together. In the center of the same flat land strip, flanked on both sides by the fishermen's homes, is a large, open square forty yards from the water front. Here stands Plymouth rock, the first sign of which gives one a mental shock, for, no doubt, fancy has pictured an immense boulder rising grandly out of the sea, but instead the visitor sees only an oblong, irregularly shaped gray sandstone rock twelve feet in length and five feet in width at the widest point and two at the narrowest. Across one part runs a large crack which has been filled with cement and which gives to Plymouth rock a highly artificial appearance. The origin of this crack is a bit of unique history and bears evidence to the early differences that at times divided the inhabitants into two factions.

For a long time there waged spirited and bitter wrangling between the opposing parties, and it even settled down upon the much cherished Plymouth rock, which one party declared ought to be removed to a more worthy position in the town square and the other wranglers protested it should not be moved an inch from its position, even though they had to guard it with their pikes and guns.

Finally the stronger faction drew up their forces around Plymouth rock and in attempting to move it up the hill split it in two, which seemed a bad omen for those who had accepted such a thing until an ardent Whig leader furnished his sword and by an eloquent appeal to the other zealous Whigs convinced them that they should not swerve from their plan of carrying the rock to a place in the town square.

"The portion that first fell to the ground belongs to us," cried, "and that we will transport with all care and diligence to its proper home." Twenty yoke of oxen drew the Whig section of Plymouth rock up the hill amid the shouts of the throng that pushed forward around the liberty pole which was to mark the new site. The new position was very impressive, and the people stood with bared heads and in reverent tones chanted their high pitched psalms in token of thanksgiving.

In the town square this part of Plymouth rock remained for more than half a century, when a committee of the council resolved to move it back to its original position and join it as best they could to the other half. Accordingly, in 1834, on the morning of the Fourth of July, the Plymouth rock had been reunited in all seriousness to its long estranged portion and the union made complete by a mixture of cement and mortar.

Today four granite columns support a canopy of granite that offers Plymouth rock an indifferent protection against the rain and the sun and serves to keep back in some measure the thousands of sightseers that go to Plymouth with only one object in view—namely, to press up around the iron bars and to gaze through them at the revered rock, on which they see the face in long plain figures, "1623."

The rock is surrounded by a high iron railing composed of alternate heart shapes and harpoons and inscribed with the illustrious names of the forty men who drew up the pilgrims' compact on board the Mayflower that November day as they sighted the coast that henceforth was to be their home—Cornelia Hickman in St. Nicholas.

was introduced, but now tangible evidence in the shape of countless mothers of advanced years who have used it with entire success forces us to gladly relate the integrity of this statement.

Old or young, the result is the same. It is simply indispensable during the puerperal state, and absolutely invaluable at the crucial time. For natural, average, easy and simple to apply, wonderful in its effect, it surely is a living monument to the truth of that old adage, "What's in a name?" We reply, "Simply Mother's Friend." 50c. at all druggists. Send for book, "Motherhood." It is free. Bradfield Regulator Co., ATLANTA, GA.
